20-23 APRIL 2015

FLORENCE, ITALY

IAIA15 ABSTRACTS INVITED

The online submission form for IAIA15 paper/poster abstracts is now available on the conference website under the Submissions menu. The submission deadline is 28 November 2014. All abstracts must be submitted through the online submission form by the posted deadline. Submissions and presentations (session and/or paper or poster) are limited to two by the same person. Each abstract is reviewed by Program Committee representatives for presentation based on the format of the session to which the abstract was submitted. Authors will receive notification of abstract status via email between 1-12 December 2014. Visit conferences.iaia.org/2015 to submit your abstract today!

REGISTRATION OPEN

Registrations are now being accepted for IAIA15. We expect this to be a popular event and encourage delegates to register as early as possible. Early bird rates apply until 16 January 2015.

HOTEL DISCOUNTS AVAILABLE THROUGH 18 JANUARY

Delegates are encouraged to make hotel reservations early. Blocks of rooms with discounted rates have been reserved by the Firenze Convention Bureau; those rates are valid only through 18 January 2015 and must be booked through their official system. Registration for the event is required to get the access code, which will be provided in the registration confirmation email. For more information, visit Plan Your Stay on the conference website.

TECHNICAL VISIT UPDATES

IAIA15 will offer a number of exciting technical visits in and around Florence, but it will also offer a post-conference overnight visit to Venice to explore the city and study the MOSE project, a series of mobile gates that protect Venice and the Venetian Lagoon area from flooding and extreme events. All technical visits are subject to meeting the minimum number of participants, but due to the overnight hotel reservations, this visit in particular must meet a 10 delegate minimum by 20 December in order to proceed. If you are interested in this visit, please consider registering as soon as possible to reserve your space!

SPONSORSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

IAIA is currently seeking sponsors for the IAIA15 conference. Download the Sponsorship Opportunities brochure in English or Italian on the IAIA15 sponsorship page at conferences.iaia.org/2015 to find out the various ways your company can reach out to over 800 environmental professionals from 80+ nations. Book your IAIA15 Sponsorship by 1 December 2014 and receive an extra free IAIA15 registration in your benefits package!

RITA R. HAMM IA EXCELLENCE SCHOLARSHIP ANNOUNCED

The IAIA Board of Directors is pleased to announce the new Rita R. Hamm IA Excellence Scholarship in honor of the legacy that our former CEO has left on this organization and the field of impact assessment. One scholarship will be offered in conjunction with each annual IAIA conference, allowing a young practitioner, 35 years or younger, in the region of the host country to attend. Potential candidates are those who have never attended an IAIA annual conference and are submitting an abstract to present a paper at IAIA15. Full application instructions are posted at www.iaia.org. Applications are due 15 December, but abstracts must still be submitted by the 28 November abstract deadline.

NEW PUBLICATION ON HEALTH IN IA

The joint WHO Europe, EUPHA and IAIA publication "Health in Impact Assessments: An opportunity not to be missed" has been posted online at <http://www.euro.who.int/en/health-topics/environment-and-health/health-impact-assessment/publications>. Prospective impact assessment is a consolidated approach for pursuing foresight in policy and decision-making, systematically deployed worldwide. There is consensus that, even in well-developed impact assessments, human health is not always covered adequately. Partly as a response, HIA emerged and has been applied in several countries in Europe and beyond. Opinions about the merits of HIA separate from other forms of impact assessment differ. This publication aims to provide a detailed and balanced view on health in impact assessments.

TECHNICAL APPENDIX OF THE ESR FOR IA AVAILABLE

The Technical Appendix of the Ecosystem Services Review for Impact Assessment (ESR for IA) is now available on-line. The ESR for IA, a six step method to address project impacts and dependencies on ecosystem services as part of the environmental and social impact assessment process, was introduced to non-technical readers in Weaving Ecosystem Services Into Impact Assessment (Version 1.0). The Technical Appendix is designed for ESIA practitioners who require a detailed understanding of the ESR for IA, walking them through each step and sub-step of the method using an illustrative case study. The technical appendix is available at http://www.wri.org/sites/default/files/weaving_ecosystem_services_into_impact_assessment_technical_appendix.pdf.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS HIGHLIGHTS

At its April 2014 meeting in Santiago, Chile, in support of IAIA's Strategic Action Plan (SAP) and in general business, the Board of Directors:

- Formally introduced and welcomed the new Executive Director, Jill Baker.
- Finalized the Rita R. Hamm IA Excellence Scholarship for implementation at IAIA15.
- Approved the modified 2014 operating budget.
- Requested a new Strategic Action Plan be drafted, to be presented to IAIA members at the IAIA15 Annual General Meeting.
- Assigned the Executive Director to take on the role of Sections Coordinating Committee co-chair for the next two years. At midterm, she will suggest a long-term solution for continuity, stability, and communications with Sections.
- Confirmed a mobile app will be implemented at IAIA15, with both paper and paperless program options available to delegates.

SYMPOSIUM IN KRUGER NATIONAL PARK

Across the world, land access for public and private sector projects often causes significant physical and economic displacement of communities. Resettlement is typically fraught with challenges, risks and controversy. Poorly undertaken resettlement can result in a number of impoverishment risks, like landlessness, marginalization, food insecurity and social disarticulation. The IAIA Special Symposium on Resettlement and Livelihoods, held 21-22 October 2014 in Kruger National Park, South Africa, improved understanding of land access and resettlement issues, shared lessons learned, and discussed opportunities to improve performance. Nearly 230 delegates from 38 countries participated in the event, which also included a pre-symposium technical visit around Kruger National Park and a post-symposium training course on Land Access and Resettlement. Watch future newsletters for a full summary.

➤ Symposium presentations are now available for download at www.iaia.org/conferences/iaia_resettlement/proceedings.php.

RESEARCH CORNER

INPUT INVITED FROM STUDENTS, SCHOLARS

One of IAIA's strategic goals is to identify, disseminate, and promote innovation and emerging practice and issues. Among IAIA's members are several junior and established scholars who are passionate about impact assessment (IA) and bring that enthusiasm into their research. Master's and Ph.D. students in particular are close to the "sharp end" of innovative and original IA research, contributing to the advancement of the theory and practice of IA and providing up-to-date breadth and depth of knowledge on cross-cutting themes and topical issues.

The IA Research Corner is intended to provide students, as well as more senior scholars, an opportunity to inform other IAIA members about their research topics, disseminate knowledge, communicate findings, or seek contributions.

Contributions to this feature are invited. Text should be no longer than 300 words and may be sent to shelli@iaia.org.

IAIA PUBLICATION UPDATES

FasTips No. 8, Health Impact Assessment, is now available! HIA is an established form of impact assessment, in practice around the world for at least 20 years. HIA predicts and anticipates the health implications of proposed projects, programs, plans, or policies. The document can be downloaded at <http://www.iaia.org/publications-resources/fastips.aspx>. There you'll also find other FasTips on alternatives in SEA, mitigation, biodiversity assessment, governance, climate smart decisions, ethics, and IA.

Updates to the Strategic Environmental Assessment, Technology Assessment, and Sustainability Assessment Key Citations have been posted online. The updated documents can be downloaded at <http://www.iaia.org/publications-resources/key-citations.aspx>.

EIA AND FOOD SECURITY: COMMENTS FROM AN AFF SECTION MEMBER

Some of us in the Agriculture, Forestry, and Fisheries Section find it curious that there appears to be little connection or cross-reference between EIA and food security—neither within the practice nor the legislation. This appears to be the case not only among EIA practitioners, but also among 'food security' specialists. Within this latter group, although management of natural resources is discussed in relation to food security (e.g., in the context of rural-urban corridors, protection of peri-urban fringe from urban sprawl, or preservation of arable lands, etc.), there is no specific mention of EIA.

"Agriculture" is a unique activity because it both: 1) has an impact upon the environment and 2) is impacted upon by the environment. There is already excellent work by Jeff Tschirley and Patrick Duffy, Environmental impact assessment guidelines for FAO field projects (2012), which looks at EIA from that first perspective; it is more challenging to find examples of EIA work being undertaken from that second perspective.

"Climate" is similar. Given that environmental impact assessment is about identifying and then responding to issues arising from a project that can have a detrimental effect on the environment, it is not unreasonable to suggest that the "climate" can be both an aspect upon which impact is made but also that it is in itself a potential impact—a project can contribute to climate change as well as respond positively to its mitigation.

An evaluation of the environmental issues of a food security project in Zimbabwe assessed the potential impact to the climate as one of the aspects. Not only was this from the understanding of how the project could be contributing to climate change, for instance through the production of greenhouse gases, but also how the project was exhibiting a strong form of adaptation in order to respond to a changing climate, through, for example, the adoption of water conservation features.

An EIA is a process that when undertaken in its entirety can be a substantial drain on resources. To avoid this and to focus the available resources to points where they are most needed, projects are screened to determine their requirement for an EIA. This is in line with the legislation of most countries. Screening is performed by a qualified person who can determine whether or not a project is likely to have a lasting negative impact on the environment. Generally agricultural projects, especially those in the developing world, are not at a scale that require an EIA to be activated. This may help explain the dearth of examples where EIA is employed in relation to agriculture and food security. We welcome comments from the readership.

ABAI WELCOMED AS NEWEST IAIA AFFILIATE

IAIA warmly welcomes our newest pilot affiliate, Associação Brasileira de Avaliação de Impacto (ABAI). ABAI was founded in 2011 as a non-profit national organization focused on the promotion of the professional field of impact assessment in Brazil. Members represent individuals and organizations from both public and private sectors that represent the different stakeholders in impact assessment. Its mission is excellence in technical, scientific, educational, political, and institutional activities in order to contribute to developing the impact assessment field in the country. ABAI hosted its second Brazilian congress on IA, "New Directions in Environmental Impact Assessment," in October 2014. IAIA looks forward to collaborating with ABAI in the years ahead!

INFORMATION SHARING SESSION IN IRAN

At a session hosted by the Iranian Association for Environmental Assessment (IAEA), IAIA member Behzad Raissiyani shared his experience of traveling to Chile and attending IAIA14 with a group of Iranian IA practitioners and students. The aims were to share what he learned with the Iranian practitioners and to encourage them to participate in future conferences.

The session continued with an open discussion about IA in Iran and the possible roles that IAEA can play to improve it. IAEA's annual plan was also briefly presented to the participants. The plan has recently developed in line with the IAIA mission and vision in order to promote best IA practice in the country. As a part of the 2014-2015 Action Plan, IAEA decided to support financially one to three of its members to attend IAIA15, depending on availability of financial resources. We hope to see more Iranians attend IAIA15!

EIA CASE STUDIES INVITED

IAIA is accepting short case studies to be published in the newsletter. Members will have the opportunity in 500 words or less to describe EIA-related studies that they are currently working on or have recently conducted. The intent is to showcase some new ideas and EIA concepts that may be of value to the broad membership. Each newsletter will focus on a different theme, highlighting up to three case studies. Submissions will be reviewed and evaluated by IAIA for publication in the appropriate newsletter.

Submissions should be sent to shelli@iaia.org and should include the title of the study, applicant name and location, and a 500-word project description. The member's name, title, organization, and email will be included at the end of the case study.
